Judge revokes probation, then sentences St. George man for theft of payroll taxes

A St. George resident who operated a payroll service business was sentenced to serve six months in jail for failure to pay restitution stemming from a 2003 payroll tax theft case.

Kevin Brough, 47, reported to Salt Lake County Jail on Friday after his probation was revoked as unsuccessful on Jan. 21 by 3rd District Court Judge Katherine Bernards-Goodman.

Brough operated Solutions of Utah in Kaysville which provided payroll services. He was convicted and sentenced in 2003 for his theft of more than $1.4 million in payroll taxes from his clients. This included state and federal withholding, workers compensation and Social Security taxes.

The State prosecutor provided information to the court that following Brough's conviction and sentence in February 2003, he had purchased a new home in St. George and was paying funds to family members instead of paying the minimum of $400 a month for his criminal restitution.

This case was prosecuted by the Utah Attorney General's Office and investigated by the Criminal Investigation Unit of the Utah State Tax Commission.
